Vivid Description of the Disnater that Visited Kansas City. KANSAS City, May 11.—About 10:30 'clock this morning ominous storm clouds began gathering over the city. They first appeared in the northeast and surging westwardly across the city turned suddenly about on their course and descending rapidly broke upon the city in terrific bursts of wind and rain that swept terrific fourse of wind and rain that swopt all lighter objects before them. The darkness was almost like night and people fied to the nearest shelter and awaited with blanched faces the jury of the tempest. The clouds seemed to graze the roofs of the highest buildings and poured out their torrents in an apparently solid mass for a time. The storm struck the city in full force about twenty minutes past II and raged for half an hour. The streets were running rivers of water. past II and raged for half an hour. The streets were running rivers of water, carrying boxes and signs and other similar freight blown from the buildings or swept up by the flood. and Main streets. It consisted of a main building, to which an art wing was added. The building was surmounted by a tower which for some time had been considered unsafe. It had been twice condemned. This morning the building was crowded with children, many of whom went nearly frantic with grief over the appaling darkness which preceded the tempest. The winds swept madly across Broadway from the west, and seemed to concentrate its entire force in a descent upon the tower which yielded with a crash and carrying down the

in a descent upon the tower which yielded with a crash and carrying down the heavy bell, plunged through the intervening floors to the basement. The main building is a mass of ruins within shattered walls. The wing was comparatively uninjured and the scholars there unhurt. In the main building, however, the effect was awful. The falling floors precipitated the terrified children into the basement where masses of bricks and beams crushed them to the ground and buried them from view. Persons near, hearing the crash, made their way as best they could against the beating storm to the scene. The gale quickly subsided and the work of rescuing was undertaken by eager hands. The dead and wounded were taken out as quickly as possible and carried to the Natatorium adjoining, which was turned into a hospital.

Here the parents and friends of the little ones soon gathered each, searching for his or her own and uttering heartrending cries as they were recognized in the mangled and bleeding forms of those whom they loved. Among the first taken out the rescuers were busy begged them to leave her and help a boy beside her, be-cause she said he was only 4 years old. cause she said be was only 4 years old. The scene in the Natatortium as the little ones were brought in and laid on improvised cots, the dead placed together upon one side were pitiul beyond expression. A dozen dead were taken out during the day and their bodies sent to the houses of sorrowing families. Several of the children belonged to prominent families in the city.

A Number of Concerns Resume Work-The Railcoad Situation.

CHICAGO, ILL., May 11 .- There was no ttempt to resume operations in the Wes Side lumber districts this morning, and the eight to ten thousand men employed in the yards and planing mills are still out. The lumber men claim that a great majority of men are overawed by Boheman socialists who lafest the region. A large force of police continues to be stationed in the district to guard against any outbreak. The yards in the north and south divisions of the city and at South Chicago, the yards and planing mills have all fully resumed on the old basis of ten hours' work and ten hours' pay so that the lumber business of the pay, so that the lumber business of the city is, in reality, only lightly affected.
